

Three Coeds Entered in Tower Queen Contest

Greek Organization Feuds Create Active Campaign

By BOB LAFFERTY
Editor, Northwest Missourian

A HOT RACE IS INDICATED IN THE TOWER QUEEN election this year with Greek organization feuds adding fuel to the fire.

Following the lead set during the '59 Homecoming contest, the Student Senate again clamped down on the amount of open campaigning and the kick-off date was held until today, March 9, only three days before the election.

But the candidate backers seemed unconcerned with these restrictions.

"WE'RE USING PERSONAL contact methods to pull in that all important independent vote this year," David Hargrave, campaign manager for the Alpha-TKE backed Peg Humphreys, indicated.

This coalition has taken the past two queen contests and "we think we can do it again," he added.

Although the Tri Sig's pulled 14 winners out of the past 19 all-school-queen contests, both the 1959 Tower and Homecoming royalty honors were captured by the Alpha's.

IT IS THIS FACT THAT IS giving the Tri Sig's "added incentive this time," according to H. D. Mitchell who is heading the Tri Sig-Phi Sig campaign for Marcia Rucker.

Personal appearances before eight to ten non-affiliated organizations were planned, Mitchell indicated.

"It's going to be a personality contest this year and we're out to let the independents see for themselves," he said.

NO SUCH SPEAKING TOUR had been set for the Alpha candidate, however, although personal contacts by the other members of her two backing organizations were arranged.

"Peg's already quite popular," Hargrave said, indicating her activity in many campus organizations.

The Alpha's were also relying on the reported politically strong Veteran's Club unofficial backing of their candidate.

Five Dollars Offered for Best Allegorical Story

Pres. Jones Announces Writing Contest

PRESIDENT J. W. JONES HAS ANNOUNCED a contest open to all students enrolled at NWMSC this semester.

A five dollar prize is being offered for the best allegorical story concerning the display in the shadowbox in the President's office.

Not to exceed 1,000 words, the story is to be typewritten with no identifying marks and be delivered by March 31 to Dean Foster. It should be enclosed in an envelope with the student's name on the outside.

IDENTIFYING NUMBERS WILL BE ASSIGNED the stories by the Dean who will then submit them to a judging committee of three faculty members chosen by himself.

The winning entry will be published in the Easter edition of the Northwest Missourian.

The shadowbox display will remain in the President's office from March 7 to 26 and students have been invited by the President to view it at any time.

ALL THAT JAZZ

Decisions, Always Decisions

SACKED OUT IN OUR FAVORITE CORNER OF THE DEN during one of the recent blizzards, we were letting our huskies thaw out for the trek north to the admn. igloo while experimenting with lacquer thinner as a solvent for the coffee, when The Crazy Chick loped up in sneakers and capris and dropped into a full lotus position on the table.

"I'm getting married," TCC announced.

Fishing our cigarette out of the coffee and drying it over a match, we tried to think of a suitable reply.

"Well, great," we said, which was an admirable attempt considering we were also busy recalling self treatment for shock. "Many happy returns of the day."

"That's what I had in mind," she said.

MAN, THIS KID CAN MAKE A SUTRA SOUND LIKE something from Aesop's Fables!

"What's the what you had in mind?" we asked.

TCC assumed the look of a teacher who realized his pupil would never reach the first stage toward enlightenment.

"Like, the returns." She patted our large, shaggy head. "I've found the first white hair. I mean, like senility is the next step. And my social security just isn't adding up. I've got to get either a job or married so I decided to take the easy way out."

THE WARNING BELL RANG. HERE WAS A REAL swinging creature on her way to THE fate worse than death. We had to act fast.

"Doll," we ventured. "Have you considered all the implications? For instance, stacks—unending stacks of dirty dishes? And diapers and floors to be mopped and loose buttons and impossible conversations over the morning paper and unpaid bills?"

She shuddered — it was working.

"Besides," we leaned closer and whispered. "Who would have you?"

That was a dirty trick but we were desperate.

TCC SLOWLY SLID HER PRAYER BEADS BACK INTO her pocket and began to chew on the end of her pony tail. It was a symbol; either she was beginning to think or her teeth itched.

"Let's rationalize." The end was in sight so we drove on.

"Admittedly you're an ancient 19 and about to enter the declining years, but can't you think of something to ease the agonizing comfort of the rocking chair? How about producing a Midwest 'Payton Place' or making jewelry out of old Shweps bottles or posing for covers of 'The Police Gazette' or smuggling copies of 'Black Beauty' into Little Rock or . . ."

We were so swept away with our own eloquence that we failed to see TCC leave. The last we heard of her was a small note in the personals of the local newspaper: "Woman about to reach middle age wishes to correspond with aged millionaire seeking companionship before death — soon, like." Oh well, some people just have to think for themselves.

THIS WEEK'S "ONE TO BE REPEATED"—FOUND IN AN- other college newspaper:

Two little boys were standing on a corner when a little girl walked by.

First little boy: "Her neck's dirty."

Second little boy: "Her does?"

Since the column directly below this is held to items mentioned in conversational tone, we'd like to add a few still in the whispering stage: . . . The shocking climax of a soon-to-be-seen-locally movie, "The Tinger" . . . Listenable music coming up for campus consumption only . . . And, the possible screening of a top British comedy for the Student Loan Fund.

So, with that we'll add only the most unnecessary statement of the year — keep cool, and all that jazz.

They're Talking About . . .

. . . The finally official bridge games in the den . . . Everyone hearing bells . . . The possibility of a new switchboard — more phones to be busy . . . Buttonholing during the Tower queen contest . . . Dr. Grube's pop quizzes . . . A new tail for Linda Cunningham . . . Price boosting in the bookstore . . . Shelly Berman jam sessions in the dorm . . . The sleepwalker in gen psyc . . . Bookworm dating in the lower stacks . . . Instructors who walk their dogs in the ad building . . . The "ten tiny men" . . . "Let's get away from it all" night . . . All the energy of sports boosters with nothing to boost . . . The rats who squeal to "They're Talking About".

QUESTION: Students that are now receiving National Defense loans are required to take a loyalty oath. Should this practice be continued?

Gene Smith, Senior, Gower, Missouri

"Signatures don't necessarily represent the individual's thoughts or actions. One who isn't loyal would probably sign without hesitation anyhow."

Ruth Ann Hazelbaker, Junior, Fort Dodge, Iowa

"I do not think the loyalty oath is necessary and will not make a person any more loyal if he takes it."

Ken Adams, Senior, Osceola, Iowa

"Expressed loyalty is an essential part of American life and no responsible person should object to outwardly demonstrating his thoughts and beliefs."

Gary Holmes, Junior, Bagley, Iowa

"As the national government makes this stipulation, we as citizens have no choice but to sign. This also gives the individual an insight on the importance that loyalty plays in this day and age."

Paul Krokstrom, Senior, Kansas City, Missouri

"They should take the oath, but I don't feel that it is actually necessary because there is very little subversive activity especially in the school."

Bob Hill, Sophomore, Kansas City, Missouri

"I don't think it is necessary because if a person is not loyal, the mere taking of the oath will not make him loyal. I don't believe that there is such a thing as 'forced loyalty.'"

Carolina De Bow, Senior, Kansas City, Missouri

"As far as I am concerned, the loyalty oath is merely a matter of formality, and therefore it is not necessary."

THE STROLLER TOOK A FEW MOMENTS AWAY FROM the hullabaloo of the election campaign to contemplate the issues of the day. She decided it was too much for her simple mind and easier to go back to the quiet bedlam of the Den and sip a Coke.

Even there, his flapping ears couldn't help overhearing squabbles and rumors about political coalitions and rumblings of fraternities about their sister sororities. On a recent Friday, for instance, the Stroller couldn't decide which made the most noise, the Greeks or the High School Seniors visiting the campus for Career Day.

Nevertheless, becoming the Tower Queen is an important honor and it will be interesting to see which political faction is the winner. Looking forward to the Tower Dance, the Stroller is expecting a great time with the Les Elgart Band if he can find a partner.

THE STROLLER HAS BEEN hearing much about a new Blue Key which seems to be circulating around the Campus, being pushed mostly by a pair called Freese and Kixmiller. It apparently emphasizes seriousness in college. Which reminds the Stroller of a quotation by Robert Maynard Hutchings she read recently. "The monkey wears an expression of seriousness which would do credit to any college student. But the monkey is serious because he itches"

The Stroller was strolling through the Union Lounge when he bumped into a group in a mass meeting of the Union Board and they looked mighty lively. Now if the Senate would become active, with both of these groups, the Old School could become a swingin' place. The Stroller reminds you to attend the Tower Dance Friday. Who will be Queen? The Stroller knows.

6 Other Locals in MIAA Contest

Jordan 2nd In Sportsman Race

GENE JORDAN, SENIOR NWMSC ALL-Conference cage star, tied for second place winner of the MIAA Conference sportsmanship award according to John Waldorf, Conference Commissioner.

Louis Sandbothe, a Warrensburg Senior, was given the award March 4 after being picked from 39 other roundball contestants.

Jordan was tied by Jay Kinser, Springfield Senior. Floyd Cox of Cape Girardeau and Ralph Starrett of Kirksville received heavy support in the voting, leading their respective teams, Mr. Waldorf said.

Other Bearcat contenders were: Dale Cramer, Charles Goff, Leland Jackson, Kenneth Lein, and Robert Mitchell.

Senior Cage Star Named to All-Conference Starting Berth

GENE JORDAN, MARYVILLE SENIOR CAGE STAR, WAS one of 26 nominees to gain a starting berth on the All-Conference 1959-60 basketball squad, according to Conference Commissioner John Waldorf.

Larry Swift and Jerry Burditt of Kirksville, Carl Ritter Cape Girardeau, and Clifford Kinser, Springfield compose the rest of the All-Conference group.

A native of Malden, Missouri, Jordan pulled a 21.96 point-per-game average to gain second place league scoring honors.

Ritter's 24.4 average gained first place in the conference.

THE FIRST TEAM CHOSEN by the conference coaches is comprised of three seniors, one junior, and a sophomore. Combined, the first five men set a new conference record by scoring 2,151 points for the season, a 97.52 points-per-game average.

Jordan, Swift, and Ritter, all on the 1958-59 team, were unanimous selections of the coaches this year, Waldorf stated.

CAT TALK

CAVANAH

The Bearcats could be well represented in Rome next summer. Two local athletes have now qualified for Olympic tryouts.

While winning first place in the recent AAU grunt 'n' groan meet here, Doyle Thomas, the NWMSC heavy-weight wrestling star, pegged a berth in the preliminary action to be held in Iowa sometime in April.

The Tank's top billing also opened a right to participate in the NCAA finals to be held in Maryland but it doesn't look as though he'll make that test of strength.

A reported lack of needed capital in the local athletic department plus the amount of time which would be taken from studies weighed Thomas' decision to pass up the NCAA meet in favor of the Olympic trials.

A look at the big boy's record of 11 straight pins indicates a good possibility he'll be headed for Italy, however.

The second chance for local representation comes, of course, with Gary Deal, the sophomore weightlifter from Council Bluffs. The Iowa strongman pulled his tryout rights by walking off with the Sioux City Invitational Championship in the 198-pound division last month.

These two muscle-men may put Maryville on the international sports map soon.

Independent I Leads Intramural Bowling In Women's League

The Independent I team lead the girl's intramural bowling, while only three basketball games had been played by Wednesday, March 2.

According to Loretta Roach, bowling chairman, the Independent I team had won five games and lost one; Tri Sigs had four wins, two losses; Alphas, four wins, two losses; Independent II, four wins, no losses; Pem Club, three wins, two losses, tied one; Delta II, won one, lost five; Alpha II, no wins, three losses, tied one; and Delta I, no wins, six losses.

The highest individual bowling averages were: Kay Middleton, 147, Independent II; Trudi Walker, 147, Alpha I; Cicily Spicer, 134, Alpha I; Kim Reeves, 133, Alpha I; and Mary Ellen Creighton, 132, Pem Club.

IN THE THREE BASKETBALL games played, Fourth Floor Reds forfeited to the White Sox, the Peppercettes won by forfeit from Delta Zeta I, and the Hotshots defeated Pem Club.

Intramural Volleyball, Bowling Underway

BOTH VOLLEYBALL AND bowling are now underway in the men's intramural department as the final tabulations from the basketball season roll in.

The Phi Sig's have a 401 point over-all lead in the race for the supremacy trophy.

Ken Sanders took individual scoring honors in the men's basketball tourney recently captured by the Phi Lambda "Nads." Ken scored 80 points in four games for a 20-point-per-game average.
